Immune evasion is a hallmark of many cancers. By enhancing antigen presentation by professional antigen-presenting cells (APCs) and by suppressing the immune-activating effects of tumor-specific T cells, cancer cells may eliminate the antitumor immune response, thereby facilitating tumor growth. Tumor-targeted immunotherapy aims to block immune suppression and restore antitumor immune function for a cancer cure. To enhance the efficacy of tumor-targeted immunotherapy, however, it is essential to take the basic principles of immunity into account. In this Review, we discuss advances in the field of immunity in cancer, focusing on recent progress in tumor-targeted immunotherapy. Finally, we describe some challenges that must be overcome to achieve optimal tumor-targeted immunotherapy.Various apparatus is required to make digital circuitry and printed circuit boards. The same or similar apparatus are used to manufacture a variety of printed circuit boards, having associated therewith different types of components, of different types of materials, manufactured to meet various specifications. Typically printed circuit boards are utilized for electronic devices that are electrically coupled to one another. For example, computer systems may be interconnected using printed circuit boards. I'm trying to resolve cross-correlation of two signals. The working algorithm uses FFT, but I don't know how to get the right result. I found out in the document, that FFT can be used with only upper-half of the array so that I will use only first k elements of my x[n]. If FFT (or IFFT) will be used to make it working, so there will be right bit order in output, won't it? However, in the documents I found
